SLAIN SERGEANT THOUGHT CAPTIVE

Family Hoped Frank Lewis, Reported Dead Now, Would Return

TWO KILLED ON LIST Philadelphian Reported as Wounded Known to Be Among Lost

Minor casualties swell the official re- port today.

The names of forty-nine men from this city and its suburbs appear among the 1868 given out for the country.

Two Philadelphians are reported killed in action—Sergeant Henry Lloyd, 6320 Rising Sun avenue, and Sergeant Frank Lewis, 1943 East Cambria street. Sergeant Lewis' death was previously reported unofficially.

Sergeant Lewis was thought to have been a prisoner in Germany. The War Department reported that he had been missing in action since September 22, and later that he had been released from the German prison camp at Hlatat. The boy's mother became anxious about her son and went to Washington, where she found he was recorded as having been released from the prison camp and was classed as in excellent health.

Though the soldier had not written home since August, his parents never suspected that any harm had come to him until the War Department message came last week saying he had been killed in action.

Errors of Clerk

Sergeant Lewis was a member of Company B, 315 Infantry, and went into the service in the first draft in Sep- tember, 1917. He trained at Camp Meade and sailed overseas last May. The War Department has explained that the conflicting reports about the fate of the soldier were errors made by a government clerk in Washington.

There are 193 Pennsylvanians among the casualties for today. About four-fifths of these are of the "minor" class. Four officers and four privates in the city's reports are wounded severely. Fif- teen others from this city are classified, as wounded, with degree undetermined, and twenty-one are wounded slightly and six who were previously reported missing have been located. No accidents for the army overseas have been reported for the last ten days.
